I think Daddy had another small stroke last week. He's quite confused at times about where I fit in the family and if this is his house and who is here. But he does go for a walk almost every day. I usually go with him. Candy thinks your'e mad at her because she hasn't heard from you. I told her you were just very busy at work. Are you sure you have her right e-mail address?

Thanks, I'll see if I can find it. The tomatoes are growing so fast I had to stake some of them and all have buds in them. I'll take a look at Lowe's. What I really need to do is get your upstairs bedroom done. I have until August to bill the insurance company. Trouble is I love the paper that's on there now. I've given up on Mario. He's probably in Louisiana or Mississippi working. Also, once we get the back corner of the house leveled I'd like to redo the bath and dressing room there.

Carole Brunsting <cbrunsting@sbcglobal.net> wrote:

Mother,
I heard about a new fertilizer for tomatoes called Howard Johnson Zoom that is suppose to double your yield. You can buy it at Houston Garden Stores. Also, I saw a wallpaper at Lowes that would look good in the bathroom you want to redo. It has the same silver/gray in the background and has sea shells in the pattern. I think it sells for $15 for a double roll. You could probably do the whole bathroom for $30.

No occasion that I know of. They were coming sometime this summer anyway. Guess they just could get away at this time. By-the-way, it sure would be nice if you would answer your cell phone once in awhile. I was just about to call out the police this morning when I got your e-mail finally. I've been trying to call you for half the week. Couldn't you just check in once a week to see if everything is o.k.? That way we'd know you are o.k. too. I really don't know what to do anymore. He seems to feel better as the day wears on but mornings are the problem. I guess we'll go back to Dr. Fuerst, the dermatologist in Mem. City. conducting a test on the telephone lines. He stated that to complete the test I should touch nine(9), zero(0), the pound sign (#), and then hang up.

Luckily, I was suspicious and refused.

Upon contacting the telephone company, I was informed that by pushing 90#, you give the requesting individual full access to your telephone line, which enables them to place long distance calls billed to your home phone number.

I was further informed that this scam has been originating from many local jails/prisons

DO NOT press 90# for ANYONE.

Hello,

It's been really crazy around here for the last 3 weeks. First I wrecked my Prius trying to avoid hitting a kitty in the road. I just got it back after 15 days in the shop. We don't have rental coverage on our insurance, so I had to foot the bill or not have transportation during that time. I can always ride the bus to and from work, but it's difficult to get to the gym and then to work via bus and my morning swim is much more important than money. I had my annual physical last week and my doctor is so proud of me! All of my systems are in great shape and I've really got a handle on the diabetes. I can probably stop the medication in a few more months. Yeah!!!!

The reason I haven't written is because our computer crashed and we lost all of our data. I'm glad you wrote me so I can start collecting email addresses again. If you would, please send me my siblings' current email addresses. It is rather depressing to be an IT wizard and not have a backup of my own computer, so I've ensured that it will not happen again.

Dave got his liver and has been home from the hospital about a week or so. Kevan and I went over there Friday afternoon and ironed out the details of the deal. Dave is not allowed to stay outside for any length of time, or see his grandchildren for 6 months due to bacteria they may be carrying. I'm not sure why we were allowed to be there but I guess adults don't have the same bacteria???????? He will NEVER be allowed back in the lab. Being around all of the acrylic and other lab related substances puts a big strain on the liver if it's not in good order. Anyway, Kevan will take over officially on May 1, although he has been running it for the last several months. He's in on the ground floor of a new denture implant product and is one of the few who knows how to make it. Dave and Dr. Silva (the surgeon in their group) have been giving lectures about this twice a month to other surgeons who are interested. Kevan will have to take over Dave's lectures at some point and it's opening the door to big money for him. The thing about this type of work is that the cost of materials is minimal (about 2% of the total price to the customer), so Kevan is really just selling his talent. Basically, if he keeps doing only dentures and denture implants he will be all right income-wise. If he buys a particular machine he can expand his practice to crown and bridge. He can do crown and bridge now, but has to do it by hand and it takes much longer and comes back for fitting and small adjustments. The machine would alleviate these issues. The main thing is, the doctors in the group would do anything to keep Kevan and are very pleased that he's going to take over the lab! Any business he brings in over and above what he already has will make him very comfortable financially. He's already dreaming of where he wants to buy a home.

Talk to you later,

Love to both of you,

Candy

On a website about Iowa farms. Also saw a listing of all property sold in Sioux Co in the last three years - one farm was sold by the Rensink Family Trust, for $935,000. I'll attach the list - you'll like seeing all the Dutch names. I think the land values are going to plunge soon and not recover for decades.

Moss family gathers to celebrate Century Farm

By Jeanne Visser

October 23, 2008

- Original Sioux County Index/STPNS article: Moss family gathers to celebrate Century Farm.

HULL, Iowa (STPNS) -- Over 50 Moss relatives gathered at the family farm, one mile west of Hull, to celebrate after the farmstead was recognized as a Century Farm at the Iowa State Fair in August.

"Some family members were in Des Moines for the ceremony at the Fair, but we thought it would be great to have a big family reunion at the farm over Labor Day Weekend," said Arlan Moss, who lives on the Century Farm.

Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Bill Northey recognized Century Farm families at the Fair. To qualify, a family must have owned their farmstead for 100 years or more. The Iowa Dept. of Agriculture and Land Stewardship has partnered with the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation since 1976 to recognize families that have owned and worked a farm for 100 years or more.

This year 344 farms were recognized, making more than 16,200 farms from across the state that have received this recognition.

The award meant a lot to Arlan and his wife, Ruth, and was especially meaningful to his mother, Harriet.

In 1908 Cornelius and Tryntje Moss purchased their first farm, 240 acres, from the Brunsting family. Previously, the couple had rented a farm one mile south of the Moss farm.

Later, their son Jacob and his wife, Lena, took over the farm and their son, Art, along with his wife, Harriet, followed.

In 1976, Art and Harriet moved to town after Arlan and Ruth were married.

The farm has expanded as more land and buildings were added. Technology has changed farming methods.

All the Moss families milked cows until 2000, when the cows were sold.

Today Arlan and Ruth, along with their son, Craig, grow corn and soybeans, finish hogs and raise cattle, including Holstein bull calves and beef cattle. Years ago they raised hogs, farrow-to-finish, and now are part owners of a farrow-to-finish business, Long View Farms, in Wagner, SD.

During the Labor Day Moss family reunion all the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Art and Harriet returned to the farm.

"It was a very special time and a good reason to have all the family get together," said Arlan with a smile. "They'd all spent time on the farm and had fond memories. That might have included getting in trouble or something as like riding the 4-wheeler."

Arlan, Ruth and their daughter JoElyn put together a farm scavenger hunt, which they described as a 'memory walk through the farm'. The scavenger hunt included questions like 'where did we go to gather eggs' and 'where was the old outhouse'?

"Some of the grandkids didn't know what we were talking about," said Arlan. "But it gave all us of the opportunity to tell some good stories."

Carole: I'm sorry you are upset with me. Remember, this isn't easy for me either. I really would like to know what you would do. I don't know why you would be upset with Carl. All he did was bring the Hospice brochure over because he knew I was thinking about it. I'm disappointed that you can talk to everyone else and not me. All I know is that I don't want him stuck with anymore needles! He's been through so much of that already and any more blood work isn't going to do any good anymore. There is a doctor assigned to the case so it's not like he won't be getting medical attention. I don't know what else to say except I wish you would come over and talk with me instead of Toni or the doctors or Robert and others. I have a tremendous interest in this too. Love Mother

You don't get it. This is not about you and it is not about Carl and that is how you view this. Being in charge of health care is not something I take lightly and knowing about Hospice and being informed about Hospice is something that has always been part of the equation. Mother, you never want to talk about anything because you say the time is not right or you want to wait until some such thing happens. I was doing the leg work to know when the time might be right for Hospice. It must be now because Dad is qualified, so it is done. I am not upset with you. Now, can you please just let me grieve in my own way without making this about you and Carl and just let it be.

I am no longer involved with any health care decisions, because those now belong to Hospice, so I will try to stop by every weekend until Dad passes to check on both of you and see if you need anything.

Carole" Thanks for answering my question. Unfortunately Dr. White and Amy have not seen Daddy for some time, especially Dr. White. They haven't seen how his condition has deteriorated in that time. If you had just read the book that Hospice left with me you would know he is already in the first stages and has been for some time. Hospice does not stop his medical treatment and I will continue to have Robert and Tino to help. But I would like to have hospice help me with matters toward the end. I'm sorry you think I'm so callous and have not prayed about the matter because I have. But I can't afford to break down now because there are so many things I have to take care of including getting our tax info to Rick and making sure we have enough money in the bank to pay for the caregivers. When you get to our age you think about death a lot and try to prepare yourself for it. There was a time, particularly when I had pneumonia that I thought I would go before Dad and I tried to figure out what he should do if I wasn't here. So I have to keep a cool head, or try to, right now. I hope you understand. Love Mother

For the past two months I have spoken with Dr. White and Amy from Girling about when it might be time to consider Hospice. From their medical opinion, they felt he was not ready. Because I knew that you and Carl wanted to bring Hospice in, I asked Tony to make a recommendation to you but she never did. What I would have done differently, was made the appt on Friday a consultation only. I would have gathered all the facts and then I would have prayed about it. I would have spoken to Dr. White about it and I would have also gotten Tony's opinion. If at that time I believed in my heart that this was the right thing to do, then I would have proceeded with signing any paperwork. Had this been reversed and Dad was having to decide if he could sign you up for Hospice, I truly believe that he could not have done it so quickly and especially without some display of emotion.

This is not about you and it is not about me or Carl. This was deciding that all medical help for Dad is ending and he is now in the care of Hospice. To me it was a big decision and one not to be made lightly. If you listened to what the nurse was saying even many doctor's do not embrace Hospice so quickly. I have worked so hard to try and assist with the medical decisions to keep Dad with us and in one afternoon over coffee, that was all signed away. Like I said in my previous email, it may be the absolute right thing to do. But you asked what I would do differently. I would have thought and prayed about it over the weekend and on Monday I would be in Dr. White's office to get a medical opinion from the doctor that spent the most time with Dad and if he felt the time was right, I would have taken comfort with that and proceeded.

This is not me not accepting that Dad is going to pass. It is me taking the time to gather the facts so that I am comfortable with the decision.

Carole: If you would like to talk to someone on the Hospice team that is treating Daddy you should call Paula Gillespie. She is the social worker part of the team. She was here this afternoon and we had a long talk. She has three grown children in their middle twenties I guess. She could explain what Hospice does better than I can. The number to call is 713-468-2267. Dr.Zimmer was here also this afternoon. Sh's a really nice person too. She checked Daddy's vitals and took down a lot of info that she didn't have already. The nurse was here the other day. Her name is Swannell Crim. I'd say she's in her fifties. All 3 are white women. They are all on the team that is looking after Daddy . These people meet every morning to review each case they are in charge of. Love MOTHER

I'm sorry but the wedding certificate of Grampa and Grandma was hung over the bed in the east room. The hanger is still on the wall. But it's not a matter to be argued about. You are welcome to the certificate any time you want it. I took those pics from the shelf in Carl's closet to look at them. Amy didn't want those folding chairs so I brought them back with me and gave them to MAM. p.s. You still haven't given me back the letter I sent out to the five with a list of things you'al might be interesting in having. I stated that you get your bedroom set. Other than that I don't know what you want.

Mother,

All the items that were in Carl's closet were labeled with the name of the person who wanted them. Last year you asked me to come over and find out who wanted what from upstairs because you wanted to clear out what was up there. My name was on all the pictures that were in the top shelf including the marriage certificate. No one else said they wanted the pictures or the certificate. Unless there is a reason why you want to hang onto it, I would like to pick it up. I will also pick up Grandpa Brunstings diploma. There were two other pictures or certificates that were part of that group but I don't know exactly what they are now that they have all been pulled off that shelf.

If you have never heard Jeanne Robertson, she is obviously from the south, she is 6 foot 2 inches tall and she tells stories about herself and her husband whom she refers to as "Left Brain" - never mentions his name, he's always Left Brain. That's enough of an introduction. Now, kick back and laugh for a little while.

I have added the bills I have so far. They total $17,833.00. There is one that I have already gotten a second past due notice for. It is for Carl's Life Flight helicopter transport. The bill was $10,000. The insurance only paid $1,500. That leaves us responsible for $8,500.00. It is considered to be out of network so insurance did not pay much at all.

I have not gotten a past due yet on any of the others. So many of the doctors from UT who saw Carl at Hermann (and there was a different batch of them weekly because it is a teaching hospital) were out of network and the insurance did not pay because our deductible for out of network doctors is very high.

When you get your funds at the end of the month it would be easiest if you just mailed a check to me so I can deposit it and then I will pay whatever bills I can.

I know Carl will appreciate not having this loom over us whenever he returns home.

He actually remembered our house today and drew a plan of it. I have been working on him remembering this house for weeks and weeks and today I kept at it and all of the sudden he started to remember everything about it. It was very, very exciting!! He still is unable to void and has a test to check his bladder in the morning.

You have to forgive me also because I have gone on very little sleep this past two and a half months. Not to mention being so fearful of losing Carl several times due to so many numerous complications and different infections.

I just could not deal with all of the advice that was being thrown my way in a single day when all I could think of was Carl was going to die. The timing of their barrage was rotten, heartless, cold, and uncalled for. Period.

This has been a complete and total nightmare and I just can't wait for him to get well and strong and come back home.

I thought you meant for me to add up the medical bills, so I did. I guess I misunderstood you again. You can send whatever you want or you can send nothing. I sent you the total for the medical bills because I thought that was what you were going to help with.

I have the household bills covered at the moment and my dad is helping Carl with his office bills for now because we don't want his office to close.

If you want to send something for the medical bills that is fine. If you don't that is fine too.

You are putting me over a barrel by :

When you called me way back in July when this whole nightmare started and stated:.

1. not to worry about the medical bills. You said that you can cash in some bonds or cds or Carl could borrow from his inheritance (as I know Candy HAS RECENTLY DONE, which, by the way makes me curious as to why you are so eager to help her out, but when your son is in a catastrophic medical crisis, you go back and forth AFTER YOU ASK ABOUT THE BILLS, and vascillate about it and end up not helping with his bills at all)

2. Then, when I went to you about the first stupid bill, you vascillated and I didn't need that at the time so I later told you to forget it.

3. Then you come to the hospital and tell your son to NOT WORRY about anything, and you proceed to send me an email asking me to tell you how much the bills were, so I did.

4. THEN you vascillate ONCE AGAIN and say oh, sorry I just meant the utility bills, etc. You have got my head turned around and I don't know WHAT YOU MEAN when you say you are going to help, and then you back out of it.

I really don't care anymore what you do with your money. I am not up to these games . I just learned that Carl will be in until the middle of October. If you want to help your son you can either:

1. Send a check for any amount you wish, or
2. Keep your money.

I am confused. My understanding was that you were going to get money this week after you had just talked to the woman to give us 25,000.

That is what you just told me the other day on the phone and it is what you told Carl as well.. Is that not the case now????Now you seem to be changing it all around again.

Is there not a check for $25,000 coming for Carl and I now, or is there?????

Please clarify.

I really need to know the truth about this because Carl just told me this morning that he called you and you promised him the check would be given to us this week.

I am really busy with trying to get things in order for Carl and I have to also go out of town to check on my father. I don't have time for this and I really need to know if you are sending us the check like you promised Carl or not .Just please tell me YES or NO if you are sending the check like you said.

In the meantime, I am with Carl all day trying to get him to draw, write, read and talk as well as work his legs and arms to regain his strength so he can eventually stand up (yes, he is so weak he is unable to stand at this point). He is also so weak that I have to feed him his 3 meals a day. I hope you are all having a fun time together talking about this whole sistuaion and how things should be run.

He came very close to dying and lapsed into a coma for several days,could not breathe on his own and acquired pneumonia not once, but twice.

For every day he has been in that bed, the doctor says it will take 3 days to regain strength.We are talking months.

I must say I am rather astonished that he has been in so long now and not one visit from you.The only parameter I have regarding that is when my brother was in critical condtion for 2 weeks and my handicapped father got rides from 3 different people to drive him over 100 miles so that he could see his son.

Also,I did not use the phrase 'freaked out' - that was what Carole said to me. You don't have to worry about me ever asking you for any help again with Carl's bills, because it has become blatantly obvious that you did not really mean it when you offered to help.Carl and I will just have to navigate through this together whenever he is home and better.

I just cannot talk to anyone right now in your family after my experience with some of your daughters this week. In the beginning of all of this (nearly 8 weeks ago) with Carl in critical condition, they seemed supportive as did you - when you offered to help with the medical bills for your son. In light of recent events, this does not seem to be the case at all.

I have had Anita not return my emails or phone calls, I have had Carole tell me I should not have asked you for help with that one bill, I have had Amy call me and tell me what I need to do with my life and Carl's. I have had her also call me after she and Candy have spent the day gossiping about my situation and actually tell me NOT to read a vile and evil email from Candy addressed to me. I did not read it because I do not care what Candy has to say to me on any subject especially this one.

It has become increasingly clear to me that Carl's sisters are anything but supportive and that in fact are busying themselves on just how quickly they can judge me and tear down my family. They are only concerned with how much control they have over the situation and how I need to live my life. They are not at all interested in their brother's situation or welfare. They are all consumed with how everyone else should live their lives instead of looking at their own. I do not need people like that around me when I am trying to focus on getting my critically ill husband well. If you need to talk to anyone, perhaps it would be prudent to speak to some of your mean-spirited daughters on how to not trash or judge others.

What I need more than anything right now is people who are supportive and caring and who will actually HELP. Everyone else can just kindly stay away.

I'm so sorry Carl is having all these problems. I hope they get the infections under control soon. He must be miserable. I'm going to see if Robert can take me down Thursday morn to see him. I guess we'll just have to take it one day at a time for awhile. If I can do anything to help just let me know.

He is still having urinary retention and unable to void on his own. He has to be cathed every 3 to 4 hours. He also has bowel incontinence. This seems to be indicative of spinal cord involvement. The urologist is supposed to order a urodynamics study on him sometime in the near future. The infection is already being treated with antibiotics and the course will end soon, but that really is not the cause of his retention..

I am hoping that he regains enough strength to be able to come home at the end of the month because if he does not it is possible he will have to go into a skilled nursing facility which will only complicate things. I do not know if our insurance will pay for TIRR much longer, and I will not be able to care for him at home unless he gets strong enough to stand, walk, dress himself, and go to the bathroom on his own.

I, read the copy of the e-mail Candy sent to you. WOW! She covered practically everything in the book. Candy has some good advice but she does tend to get rather dramatic once in awhile. Since your house is paid for you don' have to worry about getting out of it so thats good. As soon as you can get the insurance to pay its part I'll see what I can do to help. I wish they could get Carl straightened out as far as his infections are concerned. Carol can ask for a snack of some sort at night. He told her he was really hungry the other night. They serve dinner at 4 so it's no wonder he's hungry. He's got over 20 lbs. to put on again. Does he need any shorts or anything like that? I forgot to ask you this morning. As I say, I'll be glad to help any way I can. Since we're on Medicare I didn' have to mess with insurance so I don't know what to tell you on that. Nelva

I did not read Candy's email to me as I do not need anything negative coming at me during this time. Besides, I do not care what Candy has to say on any subject because her life has not exactly been a bed of roses and I do not respect anything she has to say to me at this time when all I am trying to do is get my husband of 29 years well and home. Candy has a big mouth and her husband walked out on her, so what she could ever have to say to me at this time is totally meaningless. Besides, trekking around with Middle Eastern saxophone players is not exactly something I can relate to. I can see why she so urgently needed some of her inheritance from you. I suppose she also has those grown 30-something year old sons to support as well. So much for that.

I have many medical bills and the biggest one hasn't been paid by the insurance company yet. Yes, our house is paid for but that does not pay the medical bills. So, anything you wish to help with is to your discretion unless you are talked out of it again by your daughters. I know they are trying to protect their inheritance and do not wish to have it depleted in order to help their brother. I have nothing more to say about that.

I have seen them plot against one another for decades and have nothing more to comment on that because I have heard some pretty damaging things go on between your daughters against one another. This being the biggest reason for not frequenting your house often due to the underlying tension at any given time among them all. It is truly mystifying.

So, even though I appreciate your offer - if you ever want to help us out here, just send what you want because I have already made the mistake of believing you meant it before - only to find out you had changed your mind. I will not ASK YOU AGAIN, so it is up to you. You can send something or not.

As I mentioned already, Carl has no infection at this time, but he cannot void on his own and he is incontinent in his bowels. They are going to do a study on his bladder on Monday to see where the problem lies. I only hope they are able to remedy these problems and it is not a permanent thing involving the spinal cord, because I do not know what that will mean for his coming home. I do not want him to have to go into a nursing home. I do not know how I would be able to care for him here, and cannot afford a private caregiver

.He could use some lightweight sweat pants (gray) with elastic waistbands. Thanks for asking.

They put him on some drugs that were really having bad side effects this week, so I had the doctor paged and withdrew all consent for the drugs that were causing him so many problems. I have been with him every single day from July 3rd....even on the days I have had to go out of town to check on my dad. I will not stop looking out for him.

I do not expect any of your daughters to relate to any of that because NONE of them has a husband, so how in the world could they have any empathy for me???? Four for four husbands walked out... those are some odds.

Please forgive me for my bluntness, but through all of this heartache and tragic situation, I have had so much loving support from so many people who love Carl.... just not much from the Brunsting end. A crisis truly brings out the best and worst of people.

No, you are not an ogre at all.

I felt ganged up on last month when I came to your house about that one lousy bill and got such an unexpected reaction from you -that I thought I had dreamed you had called me and offered to help.

Then I got another vague and strange reaction from Carole saying I should not have approached you but should have asked Anita.

Followed by a phone call from Amy saying I should just ignore all of the medical bills, and a message from Candy said Carl and I should go ahead and declare bankruptcy.

Then I tried to email Anita to get some clarification about your offer to help because I was so confused, but she never even answered and has not to this very day.

I really, really felt that your daughters had decided you should not help out Carl and me and I felt out in the cold with your family. We were going through the worst thing in our life and I was left to feel that you and your daughters were not in any way supportive of us and that we could just skip on over to bankruptcy court and that would be OK with you all.

P13829

Amy had the gall to say that Carl should not borrow from his inheritance to pay any of the bills as if that was ANY OF HER BUSINESS in the first place. Not to mention the fact that Candy has borrowed plenty of money from you for whatever reasons and you obliged.

I was left feeling that none of you even cared about Carl or what happened to us at all.

I don't think these helicopter life flights ever expect to get their full payment. We were on Medicare so I just let them fight it out. We never received any more notices. Maybe if you tell them you cannot pay that amount they'll do something about it.

I'll bet you're not the only ones that it happened to. Why don't you add up bills like elec., water, telephone, etc. and I'll send you a check for those so they don't become overdue. Relax the Back has chairs that automatically help you up. Would you have space in your den or bedroom for one.?. They come in 3 different coverings and several different colors. They come in tall but even then they'd be a little short for Carl You might talk to your CPA and see what he suggests on the helicopter bill. Do you know of anyone else that had that occur.? I guess your dad was on Medicare already when needed an ambulance wasn't he? I think they always overcharge in hopes of getting some part of it. Let me know how that turns out. If I sound like I'm rambling I probably am. My head feels like a stuffed balloon today. Sinus, I guess.

I have added the bills I have so far. They total $17,833.00. There is one that I have already gotten a second past due notice for. It is for Carl's Life Flight helicopter transport. The bill was $10,000. The insurance only paid $1,500. That leaves us responsible for $8,500.00. It is considered to be out of network so insurance did not pay much at all.

I have not gotten a past due yet on any of the others. So many of the doctors from UT who saw Carl at Hermann (and there was a different batch of them weekly because it is a teaching hospital) were out of network and the insurance did not pay because our deductible for out of network doctors is very high.

When you get your funds at the end of the month it would be easiest if you just mailed a check to me so I can deposit it and then I will pay whatever bills I can.

I know Carl will appreciate not having this loom over us whenever he returns home.

He actually remembered our house today and drew a plan of it. I have been working on him remembering this house for weeks and weeks and today I kept at it and all of the sudden he started to remember everything about it. It was very, very exciting!! He still is unable to void and has a test to check his bladder in the morning.

I didn't particularly care for my in-laws either but now I wish I had been a little bit more sympathetic toward my mother-in-law. She was never in the best of health. Believe it or not this too shall pass. It's just going to take awhile. The important thing now is getting Carl back on the road to health. Incidentally, he's not only my son, but a brother, and your husband. As long as you two are happy that's the important thing. Like it or not, we all are a part of this problem so don't shut us out completely. I might be able to spell you at the rehab next week. I have some new meds that are supposed to help my shortness of breath and I believe it's working. For what it's worth I say a prayer for you and Carl every night. Love Nelva

I just cannot talk to anyone right now in your family after my experience with some of your daughters this week. In the beginning of all of this (nearly 8 weeks ago) with Carl in critical condition, they seemed supportive as did you - when you offered to help with the medical bills for your son. In light of recent events, this does not seem to be the case at all.

I have had Anita not return my emails or phone calls, I have had Carole tell me I should not have asked you for help with that one bill, I have had Amy call me and tell me what I need to do with my life and Carl's. I have had her also call me after she and Candy have spent the day gossiping about my situation and actually tell me NOT to read a vile and evil email from Candy addressed to me. I did not read it because I do not care what Candy has to say to me on any subject especially this one.

It has become increasingly clear to me that Carl's sisters are anything but supportive and that in fact are busying themselves on just how quickly they can judge me and tear down my family. They are only concerned with how much control they have over the situation and how I need to live my life. They are not at all interested in their brother's situation or welfare. They are all consumed with how everyone else should live their lives instead of looking at their own. I do not need people like that around me when I am trying to focus on getting my critically ill husband well. If you need to talk to anyone, perhaps it would be prudent to speak to some of your mean-spirited daughters on how to not trash or judge others.

What I need more than anything right now is people who are supportive and caring and who will actually HELP. Everyone else can just kindly stay away.
